

David A. King

Executive Director

Indiana Higher Education Telecommunication System

King leads the operation and development of the Indiana Higher Education Telecommunication System—a consortium of Indiana colleges and universities—and the Indiana Telecommunication Network—the state’s public sector network serving more than 1800 colleges, universities, schools, libraries, public broadcasting outlets, and state government agencies.

In concert with K-12 and library partners, King has led the design and development of a prototype for a statewide learning portal that will provide access to the digital Learning Space of Indiana, a unique collaborative environment that will allow people across the full learner lifecycle—from preschool through to adult lifelong learning—the opportunity to offer and take courses; build and access learning modules; and provide and seek new information sources.

King also serves as CEO of the Indiana College network. With 2,200 courses available in 132 degree and certificate programs, the Indiana College Network is one of the nation’s longest available and influential virtual universities.

King has a Masters degree from the University of Oregon in Journalism (1983) and Bachelors degree from California State University, Chico in Mass Communication (1972.)
